Together Constantly in Prayer

At this time of year, we remember those who died defending our country in two world wars. We also remember those who, having fought in more recent conflicts, continue to bear both physical and mental scars. Lest we forget.

We pray, Lord, for all those caught up in present day wars, whose daily lives are filled with fear and strain. May our prayers bring peace and comfort to them.
Amen.

The Poppy -

(I will take what comes – I have no choice but hear this - if I had a voice)

From thousands spread, from winds of yesteryear,
I have laid dormant, in the soil right here.
I survived many winters, in the petrified ground and many a summer, no water I found.
But, this spring it was time, for my germination,
then to grow and to glow, my great determination.

My petals, all four, so fragile and light,
scream out their colour, so vibrant and bright.
Only four weeks, to show off my splendour until, to the elements, my petals surrender.
While insects are welcome, and indeed drawn,
they are not essential, for my seeds to spawn.
(By Charles Hill - a neighbour of mine)
